Sheraton Waikiki Unveils Its New Convention Center

The Newly Redone Hawaii Ballroom Debuted with the International Women’s Leadership Conference

As part of a nearly $200 million plan to enhance its product, the Sheraton Waikiki reopened its 2nd floor Convention Center, including Waikiki’s largest hotel ballroom area, the Hawaii Ballroom, September 24. The new function space was unveiled at the 1,100-person attendee International Women’s Leadership Conference, which was hosted by Hawaii Governor Linda Lingle.

After three months and $5 million of extensive renovations, the Hawaii Ballroom will set a new standard in the way meetings and events are done in Hawaii with a new level of sophistication and contemporary flair. Every surface area from the elevator landing to the breakout rooms have been completely renovated, adhering to a theme of “contemporary Hawaiian sophistication.”

Physical improvements to 45,000 square-foot indoor meeting facility stretch from the foyer area and the 26,000 square-foot Hawaii Ballroom to the 14 smaller conference rooms, which were completely redesigned by famed local architect Terry Hendrickson. Event and meeting attendees will revel in the modern look and feel of the facility, which now boasts new digital reader displays, carpets, wallpapers, ceiling fixtures, paint, restrooms, and doors. Signage and lighting will be a production company’s dream as its state-of-the-art components will set a new standard in the state of Hawaii. In addition, a new energy-efficient kitchen and newly refreshed back-of-house hallways will allow for efficiency of service to guests and convention attendees. Moreover, a full-service business center has also been built on the ballroom level to improve productivity and aid ease-of-use for conventioners and business meeting attendees. Most importantly, meeting planners will delight in a newly built, dedicated office space purposefully situated on the ballroom level that will provide a remote “office away from home” setting.

Complementing the extensive hardware enhancements, thrilling conceptual changes have been implemented to the food and beverage menus. Sheraton Waikiki’s culinary offerings will now adhere to a “farm to table” concept of serving only the freshest local ingredients found in Hawaii to produce a product that offers quality, sophistication and sustainability. With a menu that is nothing short of top-tier restaurant quality and adhering to the hotel’s overall green initiatives, the banquet menu options will now impact the environment with a much smaller carbon footprint by incorporating the use of more locally grown products such as Nalo Greens, Maui goat cheese and Hamakua Tomatoes.

Menu preparations have been spearheaded and completely re-imagined by Sheraton Waikiki’s Executive Chef Daniel Delbrel to offer new and amazing culinary flavors. New signature house wines will be produced by Mendocino winery, and will offer an all-organic, delicious complement to the Chef Delbrel’s menu items. In addition, a new partnership with Satura Cakes will bring a new level of delectable flavor to the end of each meal, and ensure that each carefully selected dessert item will stay true to Satura’s company motto of “never another ordinary bite.”

Accentuating the contemporary look and feel of the ballroom will be a brand-new line of soft good settings that will offer a clean, contemporary look with organic accents. These items include new hot grills, tables, chairs, glassware, silverware and linens. In addition, plating and serving setups have also undergone dramatic transformations and will hold true to the standard of the hotel’s objective of offering a top-tier restaurant product in a ballroom setting.

Another important key component in keeping true to the concept of offering a restaurant experience is the training of employees in upscale dining service standards and techniques. Sheraton Waikiki’s banquet and catering staff have undergone intensive training and numerous presentations to ensure the highest level of service delivery to banquet customers.

Kelly Sanders, general manager, Sheraton Waikiki, said the hotel’s ballroom facilities are a large part of the identity of the property and are second to none in the state of Hawaii. “The transformation of our meetings product, service, and food and beverage concepts will completely revolutionize the way banquets are perceived and done in Hawaii,” said Sanders. “At Sheraton Waikiki, we continue to implement cutting edge design elements, service approaches and food and beverage products for our customers in all phases of our operations.”

Flattering testimonials about the new ballroom, the service, and food and beverage have already been heard from many of the 1,100 attendees of Governor Lingle’s International Women’s Leadership Conference, which was held in the new facility. Lenny Klompus, senior communications advisor to Lingle, said, “Everything from the look and feel of the new ballroom, the service, and new culinary concepts was absolutely first class. This is a testament to how Sheraton Waikiki has managed to take an already great product and transform it into a modern, sophisticated place to gather and hold high-level meetings and conventions, while still maintaining a Hawaiian sense of place.”

Mayor Designates October as Arts and Humanities Month in Honolulu

Mayor Mufi Hannemann will proclaim October as National Arts and Humanities Month (NAHM) in Honolulu at a special ceremony scheduled for 11 a.m., September 26, in his office.

The proclamation, which will invite everyone to visit a museum, art gallery, or historic site, will be presented to representatives of the arts community, the Hawaii Museums Association, and Alliance for Arts Education.

NAHM is a nation-wide collective celebration of culture in America. Held every October and coordinated by Americans for the Arts, it is the largest annual celebration of the arts and humanities in the nation. The City and County of Honolulu is joining thousands of arts organizations and communities across the nation to celebrate NAHM.

Mayor Hannemann said, "Arts and Humanities Month gives us all the opportunity to support Honolulu's artists, performers, museums, and galleries, and to celebrate the often overlooked economic, educational, and civic engagement values that the arts impart in our daily lives. Supporting and promoting the arts in Honolulu is something we should all take pride in and embrace, particularly given the diversity of our island community and the contributions our many ethnic groups have made to culture and the arts."

"As chair of the U.S. Conference of Mayors' Committee on Tourism, Arts, Parks, Entertainment, and Sports, we are succeeding in making the arts one of our national priorities and included it in our 10-Point Plan. With this proclamation, I encourage everyone to embrace the arts and make it an activity to enjoy and share with family and friends."

NAHM is also a time to remind and encourage organizations of the City's Adopt-a-Sculpture program. The program is an opportunity for organizations to express their civic pride by being actively involved in the preservation of public art. There are more than 80 public monuments and sculptures available for adoption throughout Oahu.

For more information, call the Mayor's Office of Culture and the Arts, at 768-6622.

Local singer/songwriter Stephen Inglis pairs up with world and jazz guitarist Michael Tannenbaum to bring you the ultimate slack key concert. Both artists have been trained in the slack key method and share an undying passion for the island-originated genre.

Inglis, a Palolo native, gained local and national recognition after being mentored by slack key master Ozzie Kotani. His songs about places, love stories and experiences in Hawaii are performed in the traditional style as a tribute to his island home. This combination of extraordinary talent is not to be missed.

Photography Exhibition Featuring Perry Sorenson

Many people in Hawaii's visitor industry know Perry Sorenson from his 15 years as chief operating officer for Outrigger Hotels & Resorts before his retirement at the end of 2005. Did you also know that he's an award-winning photographer? In 1996, one of his photos was awarded an Honorable Mention by National Geographic Traveler magazine and appeared in the magazine's 1997 calendar.

Since retiring two years ago, Perry has had the chance to travel the world and rekindle his love of photography. According to Perry, "seeing the world as a beautiful place just waiting to be discovered moment by moment has led to some wonderful encounters with people and places around the world."

In October, the people of Hawaii have a chance to enjoy some of those "encounters" at a special photo exhibit at South Street Gallery, 627 South Street, Honolulu, Hawaii. On display is a selection of photos Perry took on a trek to the Annapurna base camp in the Himalaya Mountains of Nepal. Photos of a trip biking through the Tuscan region of Italy and to Rome, and a safari in Africa are also on display.

"Naturally, I travel to see the sights," Perry said, "but I photograph to understand. Looking at a scene through a viewfinder forces you to slow down and really see something, whether large or small, in terms of light and texture and shape. It's these moments of discovery that I try to convey and thus share through my photos."

An opening reception will be held at the Gallery on Friday, October 3, from 6:00 to 9:00PM. Thereafter the Gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9:00AM to 5:00PM through the month of October. As a means of giving back, Perry and his wife, Sally, will donate all proceeds from the exhibit to selected schools in Nepal and Zambia.
