City to build new Zoo entrance

Mayor Mufi Hannemann and City officials broke ground this morning for a new entrance to the Honolulu Zoo.

The entrance is in keeping with the zoo master plan that calls for an entrance that is more visible and closer to the parking lot.

It will feature multiple ticket lines to accommodate visitors and a 2,000-square-foot gift shop. The existing information kiosk at the corner of Kapahulu and Kalākaua avenues will be demolished and replaced with a low wall ground sign, identifying Kapiʻolani Park and the zoo. Cost will be $3.26 million.

The existing entrance, designed by noted island architect Alfred Preis, will be renovated at a later date. The parking lot is slated for repaving in 2011, when the entrance is completed.

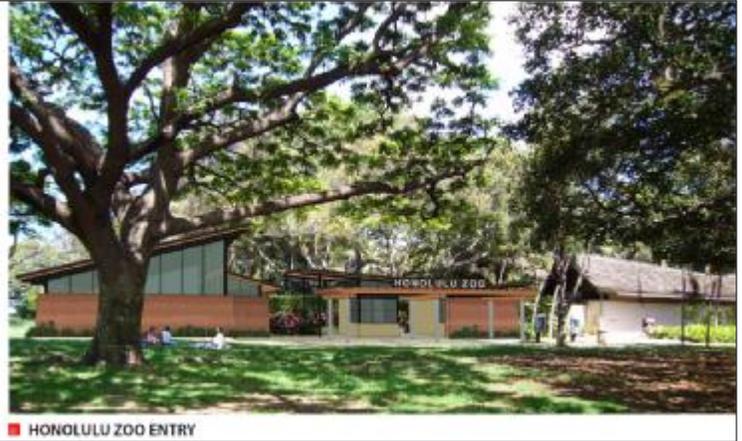

Mayor Hannemann said, “This is another in a series of projects we’ve completed or begun for the Honolulu Zoo. The orangutan home for Rusti and Violet, veterinary clinic, Keiki Zoo, learning center, and now the new entrance demonstrate the commitment we’ve made to ensuring the success of one of Honolulu’s premier attractions for residents and visitors of all ages.”

Project background

1. Chapter 343 HRS, 11-200 HAR (Environmental disclosure requirements)

EA was prepared for the original entrance under the May 2000 "Environmental Assessment for Honolulu Zoo Master Plan". The revised entrance proposal is included under the "Kapiolani Park Master Plan Update of 2008", FONSI published in May 8, 2008 OEQC bulletin. The Department of Design and Construction is the accepting agency.

2. SMA (Special Management Area) permit

The revised entrance proposal is included under the SMA permit for the "Kapiolani Park Master Plan Update of 2008", approved by the Honolulu City Council on January 28, 2009.

3. Diamond Head Special District Permit

Special District Permit 2008/SD-65 issued on February 3, 2009 by the City Department of Planning and Permitting.

4. Historic Hawaii Foundation

Reviewed plans and determined that the new entrance would not significantly impact the existing Preis Building. Letter dated April 15, 2009 enclosed.

5. Construction Permits

DLNR-Historic Preservation approved Demolition Permit on April 15, 2009, and approved Foundation Permit for new entrance on April 22, 2009.

6. Construction

Construction is to begin once the relocation of the Zoo Administration is made. This is expected to be done to approximately 4-5 weeks.

HISTORIC HAWAII FOUNDATION

Excerpts from a letter to the Department of
Design and Construction about the project

HHF feels that the new construction of the zoo entrance should be compatible with the design and scale of the present zoo entrance and should also be compatible with the historic landscape of Kapi'olani Park, which is listed on the Hawai'i Register of Historic Places.

The current plan calls for the demolition of the information booth at Kapahulu and Kalākaua Avenues and the construction of a 3' sign that reads "Kapi'olani Park Honolulu Zoo" in its place. Additionally the demolition of modular buildings inside the zoo and the demolition of the walkway from the parking entrance are proposed. HHF does not have concerns regarding the actions proposed above.

Preis's architecture is extremely significant to the architectural history of Hawai'i. The design of the zoo entrance, particularly the roof design, is characteristic of Preis's design aesthetic. He designed numerous structures including the USS Arizona Memorial at Pearl Harbor, First Methodist Church on Beretania Street, ILWU headquarters on Atkinson Street, and numerous residential structures throughout the city, some of which are listed on the Hawai'i Register of Historic Places. As the State Planning Coordinator, Preis was instrumental in designing the Honolulu Civic Center, transforming the area into the downtown that we know today. Preis passed away in 1993, but his legacy lives on in these buildings, which are easily identifiable across O'ahu.

Outrigger Enterprises Group awarded for recycling accomplishments

“Green Leader Award” lauds the Waikīkī Hotels for leadership in sustainability

Outrigger Enterprises Group received the inaugural “Green Leader Award” today from Reynolds Recycling for being top recycling and sustainability leaders in Hawai‘i’s tourism industry. Outrigger’s owned and operated hotels in Waikīkī have prevented over 48,000 pounds of recyclable material from entering Honolulu’s landfill by recovering more than one million beverage containers from their guest rooms since 2006.

On Monday, Nov 16, 2009, Outrigger Enterprises Group was presented with the inaugural “Green Leader Award” from Reynolds Recycling for being a top recycling and sustainability leader in Hawai‘i’s tourism industry. Joining in the ceremony were Honolulu Mayor Mufi Hannemann; Terry Telfer, Reynolds Recycling president; David Carey, President & CEO of Outrigger Enterprises Group; and Senator Brickwood Galuteria. Since 2006 Outrigger’s owned and operated hotels in Waikīkī have prevented over 48,000 pounds of recyclable material from entering Honolulu’s landfill by recovering more

“With over 4,000 guest rooms in Waikīkī, we realized that our combined efforts could make a significant impact in keeping Hawai‘i green,” said David Carey, president and CEO of Outrigger Enterprises Group. “Hawai‘i’s beauty rests heavily on our pristine environment and as ambassadors for the tourism industry, it is our responsibility to not only maintain, but to improve our Hawai‘i home for future generations to enjoy.”

“Reynolds Recycling is proud to honor businesses like Outrigger Enterprises Group, who complement our mission of Helping Hawai‘i Recycle,” said Reynolds Recycling president Terry Telfer. “Their steadfast commitment to removing recyclable material from their guest rooms sets a high standard for others in their industry, and their charitable support for Hawai‘i’s nonprofit community is commendable.”

Some impressive facts and figures regarding Outrigger Enterprises Group’s recycling efforts:

- 14,595 pounds -- the amount of aluminum recycled since 2006. This has saved 109,465 kilowatts of electricity, conserved 11,530 gallons of gas, and if stacked end to end, could wrap around Kapiolani Park 18 times!
- 36,317 pounds -- the amount of plastic recycled since 2006. This has saved over 69 barrels of petroleum, preserved 135 cubic yards of landfill space, and if stacked end to end, could go up and down Diamond Head over 54 times!
- Half a million -- the number of containers that Outrigger Enterprises Group is projected to recycle in 2009 alone. Compared to 2008, the hotel properties will more than double the number of recyclables they remove from the waste stream in 2009.

- Outrigger Enterprises Group is one of Reynolds Recycling's most committed participants in its Business Sponsorship Program; this means that a portion of the recycling funds raised are designated to local charities. Every bottle and can collected is a win-win for Hawai'i's natural environment and for those who provide much needed services to Hawai'i's community.

At any given time, Reynolds Recycling works with over six dozen schools, nonprofits, and business sponsors as part of its recycling fundraising programs. Wanting to commend and highlight the actions of these sustainable establishments and individuals that choose to lead by example, Reynolds Recycling created its Annual Green Leaders Award in 2009. Outrigger Enterprises Group is the first recipient of this award.

Outrigger Enterprises Group's sustainability initiatives do not stop at recycling, however. Multiple properties have incorporated energy saving techniques in an effort to be more eco-friendly and to preserve the island's natural resources. The installation of low flow toilets and showers help reduce the amount of water used daily. To combat high energy use, incandescent light bulbs have been replaced with compact fluorescent bulbs. A number of Outrigger and OHANA properties have installed the INNCOM Energy Management System which allows hotels to control the thermostat and temperature in rooms when they are vacant, rented, or when they are rented and not occupied.

The OHANA Waikiki Beachcomber received an ENERGY STAR designation by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) earlier this year. The Outrigger Waikiki and Outrigger Reef hotels work with local retailer Kini Beach to collect grass beach mats, plastic body boards, air mattresses, inner tubes and other "disposable" beach toys left behind in hotel rooms which are then collected by Kini Beach and turned into chic eco-products like handbags and totes, and canoe/SUP paddle covers retailed in stores on Oahu, Maui and Kauai.

"It is obvious that the simple phrase of 'going green' has taken on a big meaning for Outrigger Enterprises Group," said Carey. "I'm particularly pleased that many of our efforts have been suggested and driven by our own employees. One of our core corporate values is "wahi" or place, which states 'we protect, care for and live in harmony with the land, our workplace, its people and cultures.' The Reynolds Recycling 'Green Leader Award' is a shining example of our company's and employees' commitment to living our values and being contributing members of not only our own community in which we live, but in the larger global community."

Great Dining, Free Parking Promotion Through January 31, 2010

Parking rates may be on the rise at the Honolulu Zoo side of Waikiki, but at Royal Hawaiian Center, parking is still very affordable. Combined parking validations give customers up to 5 hours of parking for less than 50 cents an hour.

"To make our kamaaina feel at home in Waikiki, affordable parking is crucial," said Marleen Akau, general manager for Royal Hawaiian Center. "Many locals are just starting to venture back to Waikiki and while our restaurants are the most popular draw, we want to give people time to also explore the unique mix of shops at the Center."
